(1) Recent Grant Assistance for Grassroots Human Security Projects in Tanzania

The Embassy of Japan in Tanzania keeps on contributing to the local community and the people in Tanzania by constructing maternity wards at health centres to provide safe and better environment for expecting women or supplying ambulance/medical equipment to Health centres/ hospitals for improving accessibility of medical treatment.

Another example, the Embassy of Japan contributes to local community in the water supply field, such as constructing water supply systems to improve the limited access to safe water for villagers in Unguja, 2019. Before the project implemented, the villagers needed to walk more than 10 km for drawing water every day, but now they can access safe and clean water easily, and can spare time for other activities, study, work and so on.

In educational projects, the Embassy of Japan in Tanzania provides grants to construct/ renovate the school facilities, such as classrooms, dormitories, security fences, administration blocks and so forth for improving the educational environment.

Also, since the current Government of Japan keenly focuses on gender equality in and out of Japan, a lot of dormitories for students, especially for girls, at secondary schools were constructed by the scheme in Tanzania. Previously to the projects, girls had to walk to school for a long distance and dark paths in the early morning and late evening every day, but now they spare enough time to study and spend their safe school lives. The "Sakura Girls Secondary School" which was assisted through the GGHSP (KUSANONE) was mentioned in the address by former Prime Minister Abe at the Seventy-Fourth Session of United Nations General Assembly in 2019. The all-girls' secondary school opened in January 2016, in Arusha, an area the Masai and others call home, through the efforts of a group of Japanese people in order to develop future female leaders in Tanzania.

Moreover, the Embassy of Japan has implemented projects for vocational trainings. For instance, there was a project for the renovation of the classrooms of a Vocational Training Centre for People with Disabilities in Dar es Salaam. The centre provides the courses, such as sewing, electrician, masonry, carpentry, agriculture and livestock which are in high demand in Tanzania.

While there are hundreds of requests from local people in Tanzania, the Embassy of Japan evaluates those requests according to the importance of human security, the competency of the proposer and the project feasibility and sustainability.
